MEMBERSHIP-BUILDING IDEAS

Invite interesting speakers from the community to do talks at club meetings. Schedule the "guest speaker" meeting on the same day every month. Invite prospective members to attend.

Design a colourful club brochure to hand to prospective members. Make sure it contains a "fill-in-the-blank" section if they are interested in becoming members.

Have a sign-in book for guests attending your meetings. Later, send each guest a "thank you" card. Also remember to invite them back to another meeting.

Match up meeting guests with club members who have similar interests or vocations.

Plan a club "membership-building" contest amongst all the club members over a set time period, with a trophy for the winner.

Have fun meetings occasionally! Keep business to a minimum or skip over it sometimes.

The membership committee should follow up on new-member leads.

Get feedback from guests after meetings and use it to make improvements.

Contact other clubs to discuss how they attract new members.

Invite prospective members to meetings where new members are inducted.

Do not cancel a meeting due to poor attendance. A small core group that meets consistently can often turn things around by spreading its enthusiasm.

List the best things about your club. These are the "features and benefits" that you should be promoting in your membership brochures.

Encourage club members to wear club hats, shirts and jackets as often as they can both at car events and when out in public. By the same token, make sure club garments have a pleasing design that people will want to wear.

Develop a list of potential members on e-mail. Send them an invitation to meetings, but don't "spam" them. Limit e-mails to people that you've had contact with and be prepared to remove email addresses from your list if asked to.

Have "Guest Night" meetings where each member brings a guest.

People who had enough interest to join the club in the past are still prospects for joining again.

Require members to wear their club name badges at all meetings and provide blank name tags for guests. The names should be in large print.
