FNB VOLUNTEER PROGRAM

Very few regular citizens are aware of great work being done by the FNB Volunteers

While a significant part of the community development work FNB achieves is done through the FNB Fund, other initiatives in the company further reflect the commitment to bettering the lives of all South Africans. The FNB employee volunteers programme was launched in December 2002 as part of the larger FirstRand Employee Volunteers Programme. The programme was launched to support the spirit of giving and to encourage more employees to participate in giving.

Employees are encouraged to give of their time and money to support community development projects of their choice, with the aim of helping communities to help themselves. The volunteers are encouraged to share their knowledge and skills, and to support income generation projects such as the implementation of veggie - tunnels and bread ovens, in addition to handouts and fun activities for disadvantaged communities. The FNB Volunteers programme also encourages staff to get involved in various national drives, such as the CANSA Shavathon, Employee Volunteer Week, and Casual Day.

In the true spirit of 'how can we help you?' FNB volunteers have donated over R3.68million to charities of their choice. This amount has been doubled to just over R7-million through the FirstRand Volunteers Programme matched funding approach.

FNB FUND

In line with the vision of being a great business helping to create a better world, First National Bank (FNB) views its role within the country as going way beyond that of a major player in the business environment. A big focus for many years has been on adopting initiatives that will make South Africa a better place for all.

A major element in achieving the goal of helping to create a better world is the work of the FNB Fund. The FNB Fund is a significant part of the FirstRand Foundation, which has a sixteen-years history of giving to the community. The Foundation focuses on the development and empowerment of the broader community through partnerships with best practice non-profit organisations nationwide.

A programmatic approach to giving was introduced in 2007 to streamline the Foundation's focus areas. This approach has resulted in more well thought-out and meaningful giving as attention is directed to identified strategic focus areas. The new approach will ensure that we make a greater impact on our focus areas.
